NOTES OF INTEREST

Nov. 1980 to Nov. 1981 has been a great year for collectors to bid on a specimen of the Supreme Court "IN PRIZE" s tamps. Current records indicate that a total of 180 s tamps ranging from R78-R82 (9 different varieties) are known to exist. The Richardson sale offered 28 specimens and the other Auction Catalogs in my mail listed 1 to 14 additional for a total of 54 "IN PRIZE" in a 12 month period. This must be a record that will stand forever (54 out of a total 180) within 12 months. It is interesting to also note that these same auction sales only listed (2) R72 and (3) R73, the $30 Supreme Court. Neil Utberg.

A NEW SERIES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA LAW STAMPS

Ian McTaggart Cowan

British Columbia has embarked upon a new series of law stamps. The event is a matter of more than usual interest for it marks the first major change in government policy in the production of its law stamps since October 1948. Since that date all British Columbia law stamps have been printed by the Government Printing Office, variously referred to as the King's or Queen's Printer as appropriate.

During the winter of 1980-81, it was discovered that some British Columbia government Bonds had been stolen from a government office. An investigation led to a complete overhaul of the security measures surrounding the production, storage and handling of government securities. The law stamps, as revenue paper, were included. One outcome was to contract the production of the law stamps to the Pacific Bank Note Company of Vancouver, B.C. This I understand is a western subsidiary of the American Bank Note Company.

The first stamps issued under the new arrangements appeared on March 20, 1981. They consist of two values; a $15 rose and a $30 pale blue green. The first of these is a new value for B.C., the second is a replacement of the same value of the previous series, the numbers of which were exhausted. The details of the new issue are as follows:

Design: Unchanged from that used since 1948. The new $30 stamp was produced from the identical design but a new lithographic plate was prepared. The new $15 stamp also used the identical design except for new value tablets. The numerals used are larger than previously and each is outlined in a narrow, clearly defined dark line that results in their being more sharply presented. The background hatching extends into the hollow in the 5 whereas in the $30, the spaces within the numerals are solidly dark and the numerals are presented as if illuminated from the left, with a broad shadow to the right.

Paper: Brampton gummed, white E.F. 24 lb.

Gum: Glossy white as distinct from the flat almost invisible P. V. A. gum of the Davac paper used for previous issue.

Separation: Roulette 20 in 40 mm. as opposed to 13 in 40 mm. of the previous issue. Sides and bottom of the sheets strait-edged but top rouletted to separate the selvage.

Each sheet is numbered in sequence starting at 00001 for each value. The numbers are in red in the upper right corner of the sheet in the selvedge.

Security design: Each sheet has been completely printed with fine and sinuous pale red-brown lines at 1 mm. intervals diagonally across the sheet. This pattern underlies the stamp design and makes the new issue easily distinguishable even in used condition.

Numbers: 5000 of each value have been printed and delivered, i.e. sheets are numbered 00001 to 00200 for each value.

It is now possible to list the completed series 77. The values issued were 10¢, 50¢, $1.00, $2.00, ~~$3.00~~, $5.00, $10.00, $20.00. All were on Davac paper with dull, P.V.A. gum and perforated 12.5 x 12.5. This series was gradually replaced between 1971 and 1981 with stamps identical in design, paper and gum but rouletted for separation, 13 perforations in 40 mm.

These rouletted stamps appeared in values of $1.00, $2.00, $5.00 and $30.00. These have been referred to as series 12 in the Canadian Revenue Reference Manual (1979) and could be assigned the numbers B.C. 59, 60, 61 and 62 respectively. If this numbering system is followed then the new 1981 stamps become series 13 with the $15 value bearing number 63 and the $30 value number 64.

PALE BLUE GREEN

It should be noted that for each value of series 11, each sheet was numbered in sequence starting with 1. The numerical series continued through series 12. These numbers are useful as they positively identify the different orders placed for each value over the years of their use beginning November 30, 1958. Series 13 has started a new numbered series for each value.
